Carver, Kidd look at city's accomplishments

by JERRY WHITTLE

Monday, July 4th will be the first official day in office for the new mayor and city council of Bay St. Louis and the final term for present mayor, Warren Carver, and Utilities Commissioner Lucien Kidd, both of whom ran unsuccessfully for the mayor's post during the recent city election. In a Friday interview with the ECHO.

Census count may not reach county hopes

by JAKE JACOB

The special census, expected to be completed by the first week in July, is not showing the increases expected by most political entities, according to Bill Lytall, special census supervisor.

While declining to give any estimate of increase Lytal said Friday that while the overall headcount seems to be up slightly it does not appear the oft quoted figure of 20 to 22,000 or higher, will be realized.

The 1970 census figure was 17,387, garnered at a time when many considered the negative impact of Hurricane Camille in 1969 was still very

the two city officials reflected back on their days in office and some of the accomplishments of the past.

Mayor Carver favored the new form of government and sought to serve another term as its mayor. He was defeated in his bid for another term by present commissioner Larry Bennett. who won in a runoff and later defeated Russell Elliott, an Independent candidate. Mayor Carver took the defeat as a true gentleman and pledged to work with the new council by offering his

In recalling a few of the programs and accomplishments of the past, Mayor Carver said he received great satisfaction from the Main Street Project(which has just received final bids). This project will include widing of Main Street, plus underground drainage, sidewalk improvements. paving, etc. He noted he has hopes that this project will later be expanded to include the remainder of the area, all the way to the beach.

He also noted the improvements, with the help of the Federal Government, to the city's parks system, including the parks at Commagere and Washington. Drainage, which he labeled "a very expensive proposition", was also improved within the city.

A improvement in the fire insurance rates was also accomplished during the Carver administration, with the city receiving an eight rating, down from the previous seven. In connection with this, the official said the city's fire department was increased from three to nine full time firemen, adding although it upped expenses, it resulted in the lower insurance rating.

The fire and police departments combined the dispatching duties which resulted in several thousands of dollars in savings each year.

A number of Blacks were appointed to various city boards, including the school board, housing authority, parks and playground, zoning and planning and board of adjustment. Bay St. Louis also has a Black Chief of Police, Douglas Williams.

Mayor Carver was most thankful to the citizens of Bay St. Louis for allowing him the opportunity to serve as their mayor for the past several years. Leaving a job that he loves does not mean retirement for the polite gentleman. On the future, Mayor Carver stated, "I don't want to retire. I'm considering several possibilities at the present time. I may go back in the plumbing business, but I'm just not sure at this time.'

Kidd mentioned a number of items as accomplishments during his term in office. Some of these included:

The local school system-the system was some $70,000 in debt...it is now debtfree; reevaluation increased from approximately $65,000 to some $106,000 to aid in removing the debt; sewage was installed at the football field; a playground was built at North Bay Elementary; plans were started for an overpass on Highway 90 which will become a reality in the near future.

The workings of the utilities department have undergone a number of changes at a savings to the city. As of today, the city's gas system meets all federal requirements and a survey completed during Kidd's term, which was done with city labor and no outside contracts, upgraded the system and saved the city approximately $60,000. All large gas meters have been recalibrated and checked for accuracy for the first time since 1939. Small gas meters have been changed, some 650 new water meters have been bought which has resulted in a more functional

The water and sewage systems have been extended to annexed areas and the insurance rate has dropped from an eight rating to a seven.

utilities system.

Kidd also purchased three pickups and a dump truck which has saved the city money due to costly repair bills on old equipment. An equipment shed was built to house the city's thousands of dollars of equipment, which had been sitting outside unprotected. A communications system was established so that Kidd can be in touch with each of his vehicles. Operation and maintance of the vehicles, including gas and disesel fuel, is less than $10,000 a year. Boat vandalized; reward is offered

A boat, which became tangled in a fishing net and left overnight in the back Bay of St. Louis, was reportedly vandalized of approxiately $500 worth of equipment, according to the owner. Charles H. Chappell told the ECHO he was traveling just east of the old Pine Hills Hotel when his boat became entangled in a net. Unable to free the boat, Chappell said he left it overnight, but when he returned someone had kicked in a door and stole the equipment. The stolen equipment included two marine radios, valued at $125, a CB radio, a 25 foot Maronivich trawl and other items.

Chappell said the boat was left Monday night and the theft occured between then and Wednesday. He isoffering a $100 reward for the arrest and conviction of the person or per responsible for the theft

Jail break site "visited" by escapee

One of the four county inmates involved in a jail break May 14 is now back in Hancock County confinement.

William Dwight Hendricks, alias Dwight McIntyre, 22, was returned here Thursday following his apprehension and subsequent waive of extradiction in Mobile, Ala.

Hendricks told local authorities on his return that he had no actual part in the preparations leading to the jail break but could not resist the temptation once the others in his cell had sawn through the bars and bent back the heavy metal screening.

"The way lay open, I just couldn't resist," Hancock County Sheriff's Department Chief Deputy Ron Peterson reported Hendricks as saying. Peterson said the inmate told him that each of the four escapees went their separate ways once free of the prison walls.

"Hersaid the break-out occured about, from each other. (1) ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! was serving! Do years! for five counts of ! ! ! ! "Hendricks stated he made his way burglary, jail break, and armed robery. to Interstate 10 and there hitched a ride

Fast action by Bay St. Louis residents averted a possible tragedy last Wednesday night when a train was flagged

According to reports, two women reportedly were traveling on Toulme Street when the driver turned west on the L&N railroad tracks. The car became lodged on the tracks and neighbors, after hearing the noise, went to the scene to investigate. Unable to get the women to attempt removal of the car from the tracks, 15 year-old Kevin Favre was sent westward to flag down an approaching train. Lee Williamson. one of the neighbors, told Favre to take a search light and make an effort at stopping the train. The youth ran along side the tracks to the Second Street

The two women were taken away by police officers and the car was removed from the tracks by a wrecker. The train was delayed for approximately 30 p.m. Wednesday evening.

Some 31 unpaved streets were paved and the first true drainage system in the city was installed. By paving the streets, the city eliminated costly grading and hauling of shells and gravel.

The $205,000 EDA grant recently received by the city was applied for by Kidd. Another area mentioned was the 201 study.

On the city's bonded indebtedness, Kidd said $80,000 had been paid on principal over the past seven years and $395,000 on interest. By Sept. 28, the bond payments will be down to $165,000 from a previous $228,000.

In reflecting on decisions made during his term, Kidd said he always made a decision based on what he felt was best for the City of Bay St. Louis, Adding, "And if I had it to do all over again, I'd make the same decisions. I have no regrets."

In closing the interview, Kidd added, "I have enjoyed working with the people of Bay St. Louis and I wish them all, the best in the world." As to the future, Kidd said he was at present considering several job offers, but had made no decision at this time.

Marina - Now!

The time is now for Bay St. Louis to have a marina. We have been fiddling around too long.

Now is the time for the majority to get behind their elected officials and say full speed ahead on a Marina for Bay St. Louis.

There is a start at the head of Washington Street that a lot of Legionaires and volunteers have worked on throughout the years. It is a good location, about the center of Bay St. Louis' beach and the majority of the residents of Bay St. Louis would benefit.

A few weeks ago Hancock County Board of Supervisor Sam Perniciaro of Beat 4 was spreading rift raft. donated by various contractors, at the small boat landing we now have at the head of Washington Street, getting it in shape for the Gun and Rod Club's Annual Kids Fishing Rodeo. The next Bay St. Louis City Council meeting was attended by a few local residents and a few New Orleans residents who were in a roar (now you must remember they were a minority of Bay St. Louis residents) voicing their opposition to any type of marina. Ever since we can remember there have been a minority of the beach dwellers, mostly weekend visitors, who have kept the majority from having anything. The minority made the most noise and the political leaders heard them.

This has not only happened in the area of recreation but also to industry that would bring jobs to our community. Why do you think so many of our young people have to leave home for a good job? It's a lack of opportunity for employment at home.

Our suggestion for the citizens of Bay St. Louis is to let your elected officials, both city and county know just how you feel about the need of a Marina for the City of Bay St. Louis. They base their decisions on the wants of the people, who have elected them, if the voters let them know what they want.

Most people feel like it wouldn't be the Fourth of July if they didn't have fireworks.

However, the State Board of Health reminds Mississippians that last year 5,256 Americans celebrating Independence Day ended up in emergency rooms with injuries caused by fireworks.

"One of the most common injuries caused by fireworks is burns," said Dr Durward Blakey, Chief, Bureau of Disease Control. "Other injuries caused by these explosives included wounds inflicted by flying foreign bodies, eye damage or complete loss of sight, and amputations of fingers and hands which got in the way of explosion.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that boys between the ages of ten and fourteen are more likely to get these types of injuries than anyone else. Almost two-thirds of all the fireworks injuries occur among children less than 15 years old. Boys outnumber girls by more than 4 to 1 in receiving fireworks injuries.

"Many of these accidents involved young people who were attempting to construct homemade devices out of firecracker powder or other materials," said Blakey.

Other accidents reported were caused by a malfunction of the fireworks. These included delayed ignition, faulty trajectory, backfiring. and the explosion of devices thought to only produce visual effects.

"Even sparklers which are generally considered to be harmless have severely burned small children by igniting their clothing," said Blakey Blakey added that most of these accidents happened because the people involved were misusing the fireworks According to Blakey four of the most common errors people make while handling fireworks are: Holding the firecrackers in the hand too long after lighting the fuse. Throwing a lighted firecracker at another person. Placing one or more firecrackers inside another object and then lighting Taking a firecracker apart and lighting the powder directly. Parents should emphasize the hazards of fireworks to their children and should make certain they are properly supervised whenever handling these explosives," said Blakey.

A SOLID RETIREMENT PLAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Once in a while, Congress gets down off the high horse of uncontrolled spending and rides a winning pony to the advantage of average Mississippians.

The latest winner is a solid, personal tax-sheltered individual retirement account (IRA), a program approved last year and now on the way to being amended to make provisions to include the often-forgotten homemaker. What is IRA? It is a retirement plan available under present law to any wage earner who is not covered by another retirement plan, such as the thousands of self-employed persons in Mississippi's Fifth Congressional District and the state at large.

Under the plan, persons may contribute up to $1,500 or 15 percent of their income to their own retirement. The earnings of an IRA are tax free until

The potential benefits from an IRA are staggering. For example, if your mother is 65 and had invested $1,000 a year in an IRA for the last 40 years, she could retire today and enjoy an AF-TER-TAX income of $23,625 per year. If she had invested without an IRA that same $1,000 per year in certificates of deposit bearing 7% percent interest compounded quarterly for 40 years, her annual retirement income would be only $12,744.

In other words, your mother lost 46 percent of her potential retirement income by not being able to invest in an IRA. That is money important to retirement security. Remember it is tax free until retirement, when the tax rate is generally lower and all persons 65 or older qualify for a double tax exemption on the federal income tax

Because it is not too late to help other homemakers who have not yet retired, I joined with Congressman Paul S. congressmen in sponsoring an amendment to make provisions for unsalaried homemakers in the IRA

The co-sponsors of this bill range from conservative Republicans to liberal Democrats and the broad appeal of this legislation has already generated an endorsement from the National Association of Life Underwriters and a front page article in the June 14 edition of the Wall Street Journal. In the near future, it will also be featured in Good Housekeeping and Retirement Living. There are, by various estimates, 30 to 50 million homemakers in America who are approaching retirement with no provision for income. The bill would help them considerably.

Moreover, it would encourage savings and expand the pool of cash available for capital investment by business, job creation and additional Establishing an IRA is fairly simple. Almost any bank, savings and loan association, mutual fund, insurance company or other financial institution can complete the paperwork. There are a wide variety of plans available, but they are all subject to federal regulation.

IRAs could enable homemakers to live with dignity in their retirement years. As Congressman Trible said, 'This is a bill in which there can be no losers, only winners.'

The Stennis report

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Senator John C Stennis Wednesday argued that the inclusion of a provision to impose user charges on inland barge traffic into the Omnibus Rivers and Harbors Bill would serve only to delay construction of Locks and Dam 26 on the Mississippi

Addressing the Senate, Stennis said, "I think it defies all logic that the two matters should be combined and the one made hostage of the other. On the face of it, one would have to conclude that the case for waterway user

Opposing the imposition of waterway user charges. Stennis explained, "The commodities that move by water are bulk cargoes that are basic to a very diversified spectrum of industries...What it cost to move these cargoes is ultimately reflected in the cost of a product to the consumer .. Almost everything that 15 processed and sold has basic components that move by water. If those components are made to cost more the impact is, of course, inflationary "

Stennis also contended the waterways are very much a part of any solution to the energy problem that the Nation, the Congress and the Administration are facing. Barges move a great deal of fuel - both coal and oil already, and their capacity to expand must be relied upon as coal production rises. Also, they use less energy per ton-mile than any other means of transportation."

Stennis concluded that the average American businessman or farmer "has very little realistic hope that his taxes are going to be reduced by the amount of user fees that would be collected." Stennis contended the "answer to the problems of the railroads" is not going to be found through the imposition of waterway user charges since "water revenues are only 4.2 percent of rail revenues."

Senator John C Stennis today announced Senate Appropriations Committee approval of $1.8 million for fiscal year 1978 to complete the Mission 66 Highway in Vicksburg

Urging approval of the funds, Stennis said, "The Vicksburg Mission 66 Highway was initially authorized by Congress in 1963, but subsequent inflation prevented its completion within the established limits. The project was reauthorized last year to allow additional funding. The additional funds will complete this badly needed highway and alleviate the unsatisfactory traffic situation that has existed in Vicksburg and the National Military Park due to the termination of the highway short of its intended destination." The House of Representatives earlier this month also approved $1.8 million for the project. The funds are contained in the Interior Appropriations Bill. The Committee also approved $770,000 to construct facilities to house and display the gunboat CAIRO at the Vicksburg National Military Park.

In other actions on the Interior Appropriations Bill, the Committee expressed the belief that additional funds for Natchez Trace Parkway construction would be contained in future budget requests and provided $8 million for construction of the Parkway during fiscal year 1978. Earlier this year. President Carter reversed previous Administrations' abandonment of the Parkway and requested $29.2 million for the Natchez Trace during fiscal year 1977 of which $9 million was for construction in Mississippi and $5 million for construction in Alabama. The additional $8 million approved today will be used for construction of

If more people better understood these rights and the judicial processes, even the latter unpleasantness might be toned down considerably.

The Fifth Amendment to the U.S Constitution declares that "no person shall be.. deprived of ... property without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

Mississippi law confirms this premise into orderly judicial processes in local courts and has invoked these proceedings numerous times as private property has been taken over by government, or utilities, or some individual or other legal entity to better accommodate the public welfare.

Roadways are usually acquired through this system known as eminent domain. So are reservoir sites, utility passageway systems, hospital sites and many other parcels that are adjudged to better serve the well being of all persons.

Still, human nature being what it is, there remains a volatile issue that most individuals hope never comes their way. But when it does, a little knowledge of your rights under law can assure you of your equity being reasonably repaid. The law, however well meaning, nevertheless can never fully make restitution for separation of people from their land especially where emotions run strong against giving up a homestead or a certain spot that has more than monetary value to the landholder.

Some of the so-called public-interest projects that required eminent domain proceedings at times in addition to regualr puchase have been various levels of roadway construction, parks, and public owned forests.

Marina - Now!

The time is now for Bay St. Louis to have a marina. We have been fiddling around too long.

Now is the time for the majority to get behind their elected officials and say full speed ahead on a Marina for Bay St. Louis.

There is a start at the head of Washington Street that a lot of Legionaires and volunteers have worked on throughout the years. It is a good location, about the center of Bay St. Louis' beach and the majority of the residents of Bay St. Louis would benefit.

A few weeks ago Hancock County Board of Supervisor Sam Perniciaro of Beat 4 was spreading rift raft, donated by various contractors, at the small boat landing we now have at the head of Washington Street, getting it in shape for the Gun and Rod Club's Annual Kids Fishing Rodeo. The next Bay St. Louis City Council meeting was attended by a few local residents and a few New Orleans residents who were in a roar (now you must remember they were a minority of Bay St. Louis residents) voicing their opposition to any type of marina. Ever since we can remember there have been a minority of the beach dwellers, mostly weekend visitors, who have kept the majority from having anything. The minority made the most noise and the political leaders heard them.

This has not only happened in the area of recreation but also to industry that would bring jobs to our community. Why do you think so many of our young people have to leave home for a good job? It's a lack of opportunity for employment at home.

Our suggestion for the citizens of Bay St. Louis is to let your elected officials, both city and county know just how you feel about the need of a Marina for the City of Bay St. Louis. They base their decisions on the wants of the people, who have elected them, if the voters let them know what they want.

ELEGTRICITY PUMP

Flectricity is a measurable item -- like gasoline you buy for your automobile. Just as the gasoline pump at your neighborhood station ticks off the number of gallons of gas you purchase, the electric meter accurately measures the number

Everytime you switch on an appliance or the thermostat turns it on, our power plants burn more fuel and produce additional electricity which flows to that appliance and makes it operate. The exact number of kilowatt-hours you use is measured by your electric meter, and your next bill includes the cost of that electricity. In the summer months, our typical residential customer buys twice as many kilowatt hours of electricity as in April, primarily because of air conditioning. And this increased use of electricity results in a higher electric service bill at the end of

When you compare this month's bill with last month's, also compare the number of kilowatt-hours used. We all want to conserve and keep electric bills from being any larger than necessary, but only you can control the amount of electricity you use. So, please, use electricity wisely!

> You'll find many other ideas about the wise use of electricity in our newly revised "Energy Management Handbook". Buccaneer crew includes 10 environmentalists

by JAKE JACOB

The Youth Conservation Corps, for the second straight year, has a detachment working at Buccaneer State Park in Waveland.

Under the direction of Youth Leader Mike Cave, the ten members are working towards completion of several projects begun by their contemporaries in 1976, as well as embarking upon some brand new ventures.

The group has already added a broadwalk and benches to the elevated ramp and bird lookout station built last year on the park's north side, and is now working on a second viewing station and walk.

Located to the east of the camp grounds area, the new facility will permit campers to study birdlife in the marshes between the park's two main areas, roughly described as the day park and overnight park. It is accessible off a new trail, also built by the corps, soon to be marked with suitable indicating signposts.

Park Superintendent Greg Smith says the young people in the corps are dedicated and hard working and reflect credit upon their organization.

"They have tackled every job allocated with vigor and purpose and kept at it until completed.

"The corps operates in several locations and this group is one of the finest I have seen," Smith said this week.

CONTROL PASTURE WEEDS

Broadleaf weeds in pastures use precious moisture, high priced fertilizer and valuable land space. However, farmers can control weeds with chemicals. After broadleaf weeds and annual clovers have gone to seed, spray pastures with one quart of 2,4-D, or one pint to one quart of weedmaster herbicide per acre. If the pastures contain red clover or white clover, do not use more than one and one-half pints of 2,4-D per acre. No Weedmaster or Banvel D should be used on these clover pastures.

PESTICIDE CONTAINERS

We use a tremendous volume of pesticides in Mississippi to grow our crops. It's important that we dispose of these chemical drums, bags, boxes and bottles properly. Pesticide containers retain harmful residues and should be punctured, crushed or broken and buried. Bury the containers at least 18 inches deep in a well-drained location away from streams and water supplies.

Leftover pesticides should also be handled properly. IF you dispose of them, make sure they are buried in an approved sanitary landfill or burned in an approved incinerator. If leftover pesticides are kept for use next year, store them in their original containers in a locked sotrage building.

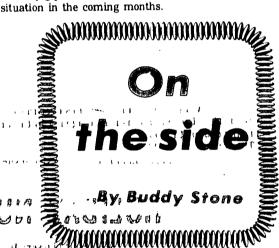

VACATIONS AND HOUSEPLANTS

If you're going on summer vacation, don't forget to make provisons for your houseplants. There are several ways to provide for plants when you're going to be away from home, but the best solution is a plant sitter. Ask a neighbor to water your plants. To make things simple, tag each plant with a watering

If you can't find a plant sitter, or if you're only leaving town for about a week, help the plants to tend to themselves. A plastic tent will help moisture-loving plants while you're away. Water the plants and move them away from-direct sunlight. Stick two or three stakes in each pot, slip plastic bags over the foliage and tuck the bags under the post. Arrange the stakes so the bags don't touch the leaves.

FUTURE HOG MARKETS

Indications are that market hog prices will range in the midto upper-30's per pound this fall. Farrowings are expected to increase this summer and fall. Also, pork producers held more hogs for breeding purposes at the end of 1976 than they did a year ago. This increase in breeding stock is a good indication that producers can expect a larger market hog supply this fall and next spring. Producers should watch the markets and use feeder pig prices as a guideline for predicting the market hog

Land use map completed for Miss. Coastal area map that depicts the Gulf Coastal area of Mississippi has been completed by the U.S. Geological Survey as part of a program to produce similar maps for the entire nation by 1982. The map covers all of Mississippi south of the 31 degree north latitude, or that part of Mississippi east of the toe of Louisiana, as well as parts of Louisiana and Alabama. It includes all of Hancock, Harrison, Jackson, Stone and George Counties, almost all of Pearl River County, and parts of Forrest and Perry Counties.

Dr. James R. Anderson, chief geographer, USGS National Center, Reston, Va., said the map and related data are designed for use mainly by Federal, state, regional and local government and private planners and administrators on land, water, mineral, energy and other resource and environmental projects. The map delineates different categories of land use such as agricultural, industrial and residential, and different kinds of land cover such as forests and water.

Anderson said the map will be useful in such projects as environmental studies, analyses of urban and rural growth, establishing energy resources requirements, developing water resources and managing waste disposal programs.

A new land use and land cover classification system recently adopted by the USGS. and of which Anderson was the principal author, was used in compiling the map. The new system divides land use and land cover into nine basic ice. These nine basic classes completing land use and land categories.

A series of associated overlay maps was prepared for the southern Mississippi map to allow users to relate the land use and land cover to other types of data. These are: a map showing state and county boundaries; another basins; and a third portraying census units by county subdivisions.

The USGS so far has completed land use and land cover maps for six states -Louisiana, Arkansas, Florida, Kansas, Pennsylvania and West Virginia - and the Atlanta region of Georgeia under cooperative agreements with those states, and is nearing completion on maps for Alabama, Missouri and North Carolina, also under cooperative agreements.
